WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPTEMBERS.

Discussion at Markham. Yesterday ex Gov. William Smith and Jas. V. Brooke, esq., candidates for the Scoate ia the Fauquier-Rappahannock district, met at Markham and discussed the public debt, the dog and road law, and themselves. Mr. Brooke opened the debate in a well copsidered effort. Gov. Smith was first assailed upon the ambiguity of his position, Mr. Brooke maintaining it was impossible to determine whether the Governor was for the Senate of the House. The funding bill was dissected, Mr. B. ascribing to it the cause of all State embarrassments. His position here, however, was quite uncertain-as to paying the interest there was no doubt, but Mr. B. thought a time might be brought about in which Virginia would escape the payment of the principal. He was equally dubious about the dog law, not decidedly favorable to the road law, and specially down on the special taxation of whiskey. Mr. Brooke occupied an hour.

Alluding to claims made by Mr. Brooke.

Governor Smith began with some humorous references to his age. Eighty years old, he was nevertheless young and hale. Born in King George county, he early emigrated to Fauquier, one of whose fair daughters he wedded at the age of twenty three. For fifty-six years they have lived together in this midst in the sweet est happiness. At thirty-nine be was sent to the Legislature, subsequently to Congress, and twice made Governor of the State. His heroic war record was partly given; his first night in camp at the age of sixty four, when on a visit to the army, he went into action to repel a raid of the enemy. He was placed in command of forty-five men and signally defeated a force of ninety. He was afterwards commissioned Col onel of the "glorious old forty ninth, which never broke, and became the crack regiment of the service." (By the way, these 'crack regiments' on both sides ought to be collated and spread before the public eye, so that disinterested comparisons may determine which is "crack," which "cracker," and which "crackest." The existing indiscriminate appropriation of the term "crack," will certainly bring it into disrepute.) He discussed the publie debt and ascribed the failure to pay the in terest thereon to the assumption of new obligations, such as education, &c. The dog and road laws were defended with equal warmth. As usual, the Governor was quite facetious in his references to Mr. Brooke. He charged Mr. B. with want of fealty to the party and held up his public debt theory as "repudiation the most damnable." He defended himself against charges of party infidelity during Know nothing times, and championed the Moffett whiskey punch as a means of relieving tax tion. After speaking 21 hours, Mr. Brooke interrupted with a notice that he "would reply elsewhere. as it was evident he was to be killed eff "Take your crowd and go; I don't flinch. His triends swarmed around and said he should finish, and finish he did, although the aspect of affairs was quite serious. Mr. Brooke took the stand, and smarting from head to foot under the keen lashes of his opponent, smote back furiously. Several bitter insinuations of "repudiations of private em tracts and of dishonorable connections other wise," brought from Gov. Smith the "lie" as here." "Take your crowd and go; I don't care," said the Governor. Hand calls for Brooke came from the crowd. Smith didn't withering as his eloquent tongue can emphasiz a comment so blistering. In the interest of both gentlemen and of the party, Mr. Jacqueline Marshall implored the gentlemen that the personal character of this controversy cease. Mr. Brooke was willing to drop it, and asked Gov. Smith to pledge him self to the arrangement. The Governor was silent, manifestly disinclined to throw away a eard which had won for him more than one tremendous political game .- Warren Sentine! THE EQUESTRIAN STATUE OF GEN, LEE,-Last night a select company of gentlemen assem bled at the house of Capt. John S. Wise for the purpose of viewing Mr. D. B. Sheahan's model for the equestrian statue of Gen. Lee. Mr. Sheahan is of New York, and came to the city with his model before aware of the fact that the committee had postponed the time of giving their decision. Some of Gen. Loe's old sol liers were present last night and expressed much satisfaction with Mr. Sheahan's fine work. The dimensions of the model are two feet five inches for the heigh and about three feet for the length. The model is, of course, but a sketch, but by it we are enabled to get a good idea of what the work will be when finished.

a fine charger, who rests on three feet, his right fore foot being slightly raised, as if to show his impatience at the sud ten check which his rider has given him. In the model there is a splendid display of equino anatomy, which at ancaexcite admiration. The spirited animal stands restive under the control of his rider's strong arm, and every mus-cle in his body is brought out strongly and ad-mirably by the sculptor. The animal looks as though he had been brought to a sudden halt by his rider. Gen. Lee is seated gracefully upon his steed The weight of his body is thrown upon the left foot as it rests in the stirrup, and the right leg is slightly drawn up. The ligure is marked by dignity and simplicity. The position of the body is natural and graceful. The right hand is extended at the side, with the army hat grasped in the fingers, and the left hand raised above the pommet of the saddle, and lightly holding the bridle rein.

Mr. Sheahan's work is a success and will command attention. Last night a number of genmen known for their artistic taste examined it critically and expressed themselves pleased with its originality of design and spirit.-Richmond
